“ When Alan and Cheryl married, I gained a great big brother. I knew when they married that he would always take good care of her and the girls and that gave me a great comfort. The love he had for his family showed in all that he did. When he and Cheryl had a child of their own he just beamed from ear to ear and doted on the baby. He had competition for time to hold the baby though between Cheryl and big sisters there to take their turn, not to mention the grandma's and the many Aunts and cousins.

He was always ready and willing to help our family or anyone who needed it. He was someone whom you could look up to, ask for advice and know it was well thought out and researched if you gave him time. I guess the thing that stands out to me too, is the way he carried himself, he didnt have to say he was a Christian because his actions showed it to all he encountered.

We shared a love of German Shepherds and had many conversations about our experiences with them. I will never forget the last time he was in my home, he teased about taking my youngest German Shepherd, Ringo, home with him because of his sweet temperment and because of how he was with Joann when she came with them to visit. Ringo just was so gentle with Joann and he gravitated to her as if he knew she needed reassurance in a strange place. It came as a great compliment to have Alan praise one of my German Shepherds. I will miss sharing stories about our dogs and what new adventures and challenges we had with them. He will be greatly missed by us all.
