“ I'm so sorry for your loss, I don't even have words. I've felt this in my gut for months and searched every way I thought I knew to see if he was ok. I was told last week finally. I don't have details but was told it was last November. My heart has known for a while, i just didn't have the confirmation till now. My thoughts and my prayers have, and will be with you as this next part of your journey moves forward. I know it gets lonely as the family and people who knew you best, and who you loved so dearly are suddenly not present. I pray for you nothing but good and happy, loving & cherished memories to fill your mind each time you feel the familiar pang of .. just wondering.. hits, and I pray it gets less and less painful, and more heartwarming each time you feel your grief, until all you remember are the great times! I pray nothing but great new and happy memories for you and your own amazing 'Druse' family as it grows. I wish you all peace and light, good health and much Love. God Bless you! 🙏
